A new approach to health

- Deep reform needed to avoid service cuts or tax hikes: Report
- Analysis prepared with feds' input
- Calls for annual spending increases to be cut in half

The OECD says Canadian governments desperately need to clamp down on their health spending, and they should do so by making patients carry some of the costs and by fostering more competition.

The influential Paris-based Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development says expanding deficits will explode unless provinces and Ottawa deal with the rising health-care costs associated with a quickly aging population.

In a detailed analysis of Canada's health-care system released today, the OECD highlights the long wait times and the shortage of doctors that already undermine patient care.

It warns that the costs and problems will only multiply as a larger share of the population reaches old age. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Good timing?

- The report comes just after the Canadian Medical Association and provincial governments separately recognized that the sustainability of the health-care system is shaky.
- They both have a wary eye on the end of the federal-provincial funding agreement in 2014.

Training that services your career needs

"Each and every day on the job, I draw on the lessons from George Brown. The courses definitely prepared me for work – everything I learned in class has helped me, and is helping me, in my career."

Mahdi Jahanshahi

Mahdi Jahanshahi was a mechanical engineer in Iran. When he moved to Toronto in 2004, he discovered that Canadian certification could be difficult to get. He realized that a career in the trades would get him working faster. Based on their great reputation, Mahdi decided to pursue the gas technician courses offered through Continuing Education at George Brown College. He started in the fall of 2005 and, less than a year later, had completed six courses and earned his license. Since then, Mahdi has started his own successful company. He is also planning to take another George Brown course as he works toward expanding his business.

Baby run to new maternity ward

At 12:08 a.m. yesterday, Megan Walhelm took in her first breath, and then let out the last newborn cry the Women's College Hospital maternity ward will ever hear.

Some eight hours later, she joined a convoy of her bundled compatriots — many in incubators — as the Grenville Street ward was moved to its new home at the Sunnybrook Health Sciences Centre.

"For everything there is a season," said Dr. Jennifer Blake, who will continue as obstetrics and gynecology chief at Sunnybrook. Blake said the season that saw Women's College as one of the main maternity centres had passed in its viability.

"Our unit here was built in the 1960s, based on thinking from the 1950s," Blake said of the decommissioned ward.

With many women having babies at older ages, leading to more high-risk pregnancies, chances are greater than ever that infants will need intensive care, both before and after birth.

And with its switch to an ambulatory-care hospital last decade, Women's College was no longer up to the task, Blake said.

Mothers in labour and those with high-risk pregnancies, and 25 newborn and premature babies were all part of the 49-patient move. TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Opposition ready to take on Liberals

► Government under fire for secret G20 summit law, mixed martial arts fights, online gambling, HST

Ontario's opposition parties are determined to take advantage of a summer of missteps and policy reversals by the Liberal government as politicians return to the legislature today.

The opposition parties say the Liberal government has grown tired and is floundering in the last year of its second term. It deserves to be defeated for increasing everyone's cost of living with the HST and expensive green energy projects, they say.

With a provincial election more than a year away, in October 2011, all three parties are working on campaign strategies.

"They (families) can't afford this government," said Progressive Conservative Leader Tim Hudak.

The New Democrats say the Liberals are an "out of

"I think that the government has made some very poor choices in terms of how they've invested or spent our tax dollars ... everything from the bloated CEO salaries to their addiction to consultants," said NDP Leader Andrea Horwath.

MAN, 27, KILLED

Police say shooting victim was targeted

Toronto police investigators say they believe the city's latest shooting victim was specifically targeted, but add it's unclear why.

Police, called to 30 Greenbrae Circ. in Scarborough after receiving numerous 9-1-1 calls at around 9:30 p.m. Friday, arrived at the back of the building to find the victim, 27-year-old Jahmeel Spence, lying on the ground.

Spence's brother Ishmael, 15, was killed in 1996 outside the Kennedy subway station.

In the latest death, lead investigator Det. Sgt. Wayne Banks said that, despite the area's notoriety for gang-related activity, there is "no information that would indicate that Mr. Spence was involved in any criminal activity."

Banks said that after speaking with witnesses it was clear that several shots were fired and that the victim was shot multiple times. Police also found several shell casings at the scene, suggesting the use of a semi-automatic weapon.

Revitalization met with joy, worries by housing tenants

Sureya Ibrahim, a mother of three from Ethiopia, is a shining example of how well the revitalization has worked for Regent Park tenants.

Before the renewal project began, the 31-year-old lived with her children in one of the cockroach-infested public housing units on Dundas Street West. Last December, she moved into a brand new three-bedroom townhouse unit after a three-year wait at a temporary home on River Street. She is still raving about her new home. "(We have) two washrooms, (so) it's a big deal," she smiled. "They did a very good job building (it). The walls, the floors, it's perfect."

Other Regent Park residents have not been so fortunate. Several years into the project, there remains a lingering fear of displacement among tenants still living in the original 50-year-old buildings and those temporarily relocated across town.

Each of the 2,083 residences in the 69-acre downtown area bounded by Gerrard, Dundas, Shuter and River Streets, are to be knocked down and rebuilt.

The units included three new community housing high rises built in the East Downtown area on Carlton, Richmond and Adelaide Streets. These buildings also feature a mix of RGI (rent-geared-to-income) units as well as low-end market units.

Although still close to Regent Park, some residents have found the move into those buildings hard to cope with.

'Super' students trying to cash in

KEITH BEATY/TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

► For Patrick Quinton-Brown, who was featured in the Toronto Star as one of the top students with a 99 per cent average, a free ride through university was not his intention for starting Whitby's first film festival, and founding Operation Humanity, a web-based network of school social justice groups.

► Full-ride scholarships from schools and private foundations can range between $20,000 and $75,000

They are known as "super candidates," high school prodigies who scoop up hundreds of thousands of dollars in university scholarships.

Patrick Quinton-Brown, who is starting his first year at the University of Toronto next week, won over $190,000 worth of scholarships. Joshua Liu, a second-year medical student at U of T, was offered over $200,000 in scholarships when he graduated high school.

And it's not just about marks. These are 18-year-olds who have founded charities, started businesses, undergone research expeditions in the Arctic, spearheaded community programs, and volunteered around the world.

With these mind-blowing amounts handed out to a small group of elite students each application season, does a bright student who is active in their student council and volunteers at a local church even have a shot?

Competition for the big scholarship money in Canada is so fierce among some university-bound high school students that many are strategizing as early as Grade 9 in a bid to cash in by Grade 12.

So is it about the charity, or is it about getting that lucrative scholarship? Or is it both, and is that necessarily a bad thing?

Jane Thompson, executive director of TD Canada Trust's scholarship program, says she's seen students' ambitions to snag

Funding

In 2007-08, before the economic meltdown, approximately $258 million in merit scholarships were distributed to incoming and current post-secondary students:

- $13 million from the federal government
- $118 million from the provinces
- $144 million from post-secondary institutions
- $8 million from the private sector

"Every year it seems if you look at (past winners') profiles, they tend to be doing more and more, whether it's starting their own organization, or raising huge sums of money for charity."

ALY KASSIM-LAKHA, GRADE 12 STUDENT AT UPPER CANADA COLLEGE

scholarships rise over the past five years or so.

"But my experience has been that the people who win these scholarships, they are doing the work they do because they couldn't possibly do anything else. I think if the only thing that was driving them was the idea of a university scholarship, it's a really hard way."

Hotel workers stage another walkout

► Yesterday's demonstration was the fourth one-day strike by city hotel employees since Sept. 3

Dozens of flag-waving hotel workers held another one-day walkout yesterday outside a downtown hotel at the hub of the Toronto International Film Festival.

Ontario Federation of Labour president Sid Ryan, who marched alongside workers on an "alternative red carpet" outside the Hyatt Regency, called on the hotel's owner to "share the wealth."

The Hyatt Regency, like others, has emerged from the recession and is making modest improvements to its bottom line, he said.

"If you're making profits and you're doing it as a result of the sweat off the brow of these workers, the least you can do is share some of the wealth with these workers," said Ryan.

The protest did not block guests from entering the hotel. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Negotiations

- Talks broke down between management and the union representing 150 workers at the Hyatt Regency Sept. 3.
- The workers are seeking a 10 per cent wage increase over three years while the employer is offering five per cent over five years. Pensions, shift hours and health benefits are other issues.

"I think what they're trying to do is lock in poverty-level wages, or a recessionary level of wages in with these workers going forward."

ONTARIO FEDERATION OF LABOUR

► Actors Emilio Estevez and Martin Sheen attend The Way premiere Friday during the 35th Toronto International Film Festival at the Winter Garden Theatre. On the same day, Sheen, a longtime labour activist, and his son Estevez showed their support for hotel workers by joining the picket line outside the Fairmont Royal York.

Data on Tamil migrants reported stolen

A computer storing the names of hundreds of Tamils who arrived in Canada last month has been stolen from the Toronto office of a group that is helping them stay in touch with their families in Sri Lanka, a spokesman for the group said yesterday.

David Poopalapillai of the Canadian Tamil Congress said someone broke into the office sometime Saturday night and stole a computer that stored information on the nearly 500 Tamil migrants whose identities are subject to a publication ban ordered by the Immigration and Refugee Board.

"That's been stolen, that's been taken away and we're quite, quite concerned," said Poopalapillai.

"We're very much worried about the families' safety and security back in Sri Lanka."

► David Poopalapillai

Toronto police have confirmed there were signs of forced entry at 31 Progress Ave., and said "a quantity of equipment" was taken from the office.

Poopalapillai said it was a "targeted attack" because other computers and a flat-screen TV were left behind.

The group has been trying to help the migrants keep in touch with their loved ones back in Sri Lanka. THE CANADIAN PRESS

Background

- The migrants arrived in Victoria Aug. 13 from Sri Lanka on the MV Sun Sea. They were shipped to detention facilities in the Vancouver area shortly after.
- The RCMP is trying to determine whether human smugglers or members of the banned terrorist organization Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam are among the group.

Canadian wheat sales to Iraq soaring

► Ottawa seeing massive potential in Middle Eastern market ► High euro helping boost Canadian exports

Canada sold more wheat to Iraq last year than any other country except the United States, a tantalizing trade relationship that has piqued Ottawa's interest.

Canadian wheat exports to Iraq jumped almost 450 per cent in 2009, when the Middle Eastern country bought 1.4 million metric tonnes of the Canuck grain. By comparison, Canada shipped 1.7 million tonnes of wheat to the U.S., its biggest trading partner.

Agriculture Minister Gerry Ritz is now being nudged to cultivate this Iraqi business partnership.

"Iraq is a growing market with a lot of opportunities in the agriculture

Beyond wheat

► A spokesman for Agriculture Canada said trade opportunities with Iraq go beyond wheat, even though it made up 98 per cent of Canadian exports to the country in 2009.

sector," said internal briefing documents prepared for Ritz's office last spring and obtained by The Canadian Press under the Access to Information Act.

"There is a need to increase industry awareness of this market. Our main competitor is the United States." Before last year's increase, Canada shipped 845,694 metric tonnes of wheat to Iraq in 2007 and 259,610 tonnes in 2008.

The briefing notes, prepared at the request of Ritz's office, indicate that last year's spike in exports received a boost from factors such as Canada's bigger harvest and Iraq's yield drop after a second year of drought.

It didn't hurt that American wheat exports to Iraq plummeted from around two million metric tonnes in 2008 to zero last year, a slide the U.S. Department of Agriculture has blamed on market conditions.

Baby found in airplane garbage bag in Philippines

Authorities at Manila's airport found a newborn baby in a garbage bag that was apparently unloaded from an airplane that landed yesterday from the Middle East, officials said.

Security officials brought the baby boy, who was covered in blood and wrapped in tissue paper, to an airport clinic, where doctors and nurses examined him and cleaned him up, wrapped him in cloth and gave him a bottle of milk, airport officials said. A security officer noticed something moving in a garbage bag that was reportedly unloaded from a Gulf Air plane that arrived from Bahrain and found the baby inside, an airport statement said.

The baby was later turned over to social workers posted at the Ninoy Aquino International Airport.

Kitchener teen dies after fall at Cancun hotel

► Investigation ongoing, but police suspect suicide
► Officials ask victim's boyfriend to stay in country

A 19-year-old Ontario woman died Friday after falling off a balcony at a hotel in Cancun.

Giannina Di Roberto fell from the seventh floor of the Riu Caribe hotel.

She was vacationing at the resort with her boyfriend, also from Canada.

Gaspar Buenfil Caballero, director of the government department that investigates homicides, said yesterday there is an ongoing investigation into the death, but the indication at this point is it was a suicide.

"The boyfriend was detained for 48 hours, but ... we found that he wasn't re-

A person who answered the phone at a household with the victim's last name in Kitchener asked the family's privacy be respected. A friend of Di Roberto's also pleaded for privacy.

Greenbeltfresh.ca

A dating service for local food

Tired of Lavalife? Bored with Plenty of Fish? Annoyed by E-Hamony ads? Try a new type of online dating – to meet your perfect local meal.

From first dates to events to holidays with family, the connections we have with each other always have one thing in common: food. More and more, people are talking not just about what they're eating, but where their food is coming from. Greenbeltfresh.ca works like a dating service to help people find fresh local food.

"Interest in local food is the highest it's ever been," says Shelley Petrie, Program Director for the Friends of the Greenbelt Foundation. "Everything from improved environmental awareness to more people eating at home because of the recession to a renewed interest in eating more healthily have combined to boost people's engagement with the issue of food," she says. "And local food is a delicious solution to many of these challenges."

Even big box grocers are getting on side with more displays and a greater selection of produce inviting consumers to pick Ontario freshness. Which is a good thing, considering Toronto's FoodShare recently identified that a dinner made from ingredients bought at a local farmers' market traveled an average of 101 km, while the same dinner ingredients bought at a local supermarket traveled an average of 5,364 km.

"There's no question that food that is eaten within a day or two of being picked is more wholesome and flavourful than something that spends a week on a truck or a plane getting to you," agrees Joshua Maharaj, chef, writer and local food activist who wrote the cookbook Good Food For All, from The Stop Community Food Centre. Maharaj was also the national winner of the Longo's Iron Chef competition in 2010.

As a local food source, Ontario's Greenbelt is vital to families across the Greater Golden Horseshoe. According to the 2006 Canada Census of Agriculture, almost half of Ontario's fruit farms, one-fifth of vegetable farms, and over 3,000 livestock farms exist in the Greenbelt.

The Friends of the Greenbelt Foundation has made it even easier for consumers to find local, Greenbelt-grown food with the development of their online tool, Greenbeltfresh.ca. A one-stop source for local food, visitors to the site can use it to find farmers' markets, pick-your-owns, on-farm markets, as well as vineyards and community supported agriculture (CSA) shares. The advanced search function lets users look for multiple fruits and vegetables, or other agricultural products such as meat, dairy, pies and jams or even fresh flowers.

Farmers' markets are a great place to find fresh local food from Ontario's Greenbelt

A mobile version of the site has also been developed, making it easy to view the site on a smartphone device. See what you can pick up at Greenbeltfresh.ca

MEANDER IN THE GREENBELT – HEALTHY CYCLING FACTS

The Tour de Greenbelt, upcoming on Saturday, September 25 in York Region and Sunday, September 26 in Durham Region is great way to have a Greenbelt experience by bike.

1 It reduces mental stress. Cycling has a considerable relaxing effect due to its uniform cyclic movement which stabilizes the physical and emotional functions of the body.

2 It helps to prevent heart and cardiovascular diseases. Cycling is ideal for training the heart to be stronger, resulting in less stress on the heart.

3 It is a low impact exercise. Because cycling is a non weight-bearing form of exercise it's easier on your joints and can be done at any level of intensity.

4 It helps to save the planet. Increasing bicycle trips over car trips helps to reduce greenhouse gas emissions and road maintenance costs.

More Than Maple Syrup and Poutine

It's a joke we've all heard before: Canada's contribution to international cuisine comes down two things – maple syrup and poutine. But as anyone living here knows, our national palate is as diverse as the people that make up our multicultural identity.

According to the Ontario government, over 40% of new Canadians are choosing to settle in Toronto. Interestingly, approximately 44% of Toronto's population was born outside of Canada, higher than Miami (40%), Los Angeles (31%), and New York City (24%) – each bringing with them their own cultural influences and desires for tastes from home.

Farmers from across Ontario's Greenbelt are responding to those diverse tastes. Agricultural studies cite a rise of between 20-30% annually in the growth of ethnic vegetables – more than any other agricultural commodity. Local Greenbelt-grown, non-native vegetables like bok choy, callaloo, and okra are already widely available. And some Greenbelt cattle farmers have even started raising Kobe beef according to traditional Japanese methods.

Picking green callaloo at the Vineland Research and Innovation Centre

"Not even people with families that have been here for a hundred years just eat so-called 'Canadian' foods – I can cook Thai food on Monday, a West Indian dish on Wednesday, and then hang out with friends and wow them with my version of Ethiopian food on the weekend," says local farmers' market shopper Susan Murray. "I love that I can get ethnocultural produce that's grown right here. Just because my tastes are international doesn't mean my food has to travel international distances," she adds.

The Friends of the Greenbelt Foundation has partnered with the Toronto Environmental Alliance (TEA) to produce a series of cultural food guides to help consumers find international ingredients for Middle Eastern, South Asian, Chinese, and African/Caribbean cuisine from local sources. Two die protesting Qur'an burning

Two protesters died and four were injured as Afghans protested for a third day yesterday against a plan by the pastor of a small Florida church to burn copies of the Islamic holy book, despite his deci-

Mohammad Rahim Amin, chief of the Baraki Barak district in eastern Logar province, said the deaths and injuries occurred when Afghan soldiers opened fire on hundreds of protesters who were trying to storm the local government headquarters.

During recent protests against the Qur'an burning, Afghans have regularly targeted the pro-Western government.

Improper oversight could lead to funding insurgents, top general says

The NATO command has issued new guidelines for awarding billions of dollars worth of international contracts in Afghanistan, saying that without proper oversight the money could end up in the hands of insurgents and criminals, deepen corruption and undermine efforts to win the loyalty of the Afghan people at a critical juncture in the war.

The guidance, issued last week by Gen. David Petraeus and obtained yesterday by The Associated Press, was issued in response to concern that the military's own contracting procedures could be, in some cases, running counter to efforts on the battlefield.

The changes are aimed, in large part, at addressing complaints that ordinary

NDP to work on political strategy

- ▶ Planning session begins with tribute to fallen Mounties
- ▶ Liberals urging left-wing party to help save long-gun registry

TROY FLEECE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

While it's unlikely to be an OK Corral scene, the debate over the long-gun registry should be lively as New Democrats gather in Regina to work on their Parliamentary battle plans.

Their three-day strategy session begins today with a memorial for fallen RCMP officers. The Mounties, along with other police groups, want to keep the embattled gun registry.

Members of Parliament are expected to vote later this month on a Conservative MP's private member's bill to scrap the registry.

Liberal leader Michael Ignatieff is promising his entire caucus will vote against the bill, and he's urging NDP Leader Jack Layton to order his caucus to do the same.

▶ NDP Leader Jack Layton, left, poses with Canadian actor Kiefer Sutherland and a life-sized statue of Sutherland's grandfather, Tommy Douglas, Friday, in Weyburn, Sask. Douglas was the premier of Saskatchewan and the founder of medicare in Canada.

Meeting

Along with the gun registry, New Democrats meeting in Regina will also be talking about how to push health care, the environment and jobs to the top of the agenda when the House resumes later this month.

NDP votes will be needed to kill the bill, but some New Democrats from ridings where opposition to the registry is strong are vowing to support the bill.

U.S. federal and state investigators said the section of natural gas pipeline that ruptured and exploded in a deadly fireball near San Francisco had been categorized as high risk because it ran through a highly populated area.

Documents obtained by The Associated Press showed Pacific Gas & Electric submitted paperwork to regulators that said a section of the same gas line — about four kilometres from the blast — was within “the top 100 highest risk line sections” in the utility’s

Israeli PM says he won't renew West Bank ban

► Palestinian spokesman: 'We are out' of talks if construction resumes ► Obama calls for ban's renewal

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said yesterday the current restrictions on West Bank settlements will not remain in place, though there will still be some limits on construction.

Israel's 10-month freeze on housing starts in West Bank settlements expires at the end of this month and is a key point of contention in newly launched peace talks with the Palestinians. Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas has threatened repeatedly to quit the talks if Israel does not renew the restrictions.

► Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu.

Netanyahu told Mideast envoy Tony Blair, "the Palestinians demand that after Sept. 26, there will be zero building" in the West Bank.

"That will not happen," Netanyahu said. Israel will not build "tens of thousands of housing units that are in the pipeline, but we will not freeze the lives of the residents."

He did not provide details, but his statement means the ban on new housing starts would be at least partially lifted.

Members of Netanyahu's Likud Party and government coalition partners oppose extending the restrictions on housing starts. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Waters still rising six weeks later

Six weeks after flooding began, new devastation continues across the Sindh province of Pakistan, as flood waters, still on the rise, continue to overcome new villages. The country's agricultural heartland has been devastated, with rice, corn and wheat crops destroyed by floods. Officials say as many as 22 million people have been effected during Pakistan's worst flooding in 80 years.

New moms hardest hit by floods

The World Health Organization estimates a half million Pakistani women hit by the floods will give birth over the next six months, and about 32,000 of them will experience complications. Many were malnourished before the disaster. Now, with so many going hungry and facing diseases, they and their newborns are among the most vulnerable. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Still looking for answers in bus crash

► Five people, including the driver, remained in hospital yesterday with serious injuries

The investigation continues into just why a double-decker bus bound for Toronto veered off its usual route and rammed into a low-hanging bridge, killing four people.

The Megabus from Philadelphia had 28 passengers aboard, including seven Canadians, when it crashed in a Syracuse suburb around 2:30 a.m. ET Saturday.

Megabus and the Onondaga County Police are probing the cause of the crash with two separate investigations.

All Canadians on board escaped major injury.

Questions

- Don Carmichael, senior vice-president for Coach USA, which operates Megabus, says the driver "obviously made a wrong turn" because he wasn't on the trip's prescribed route.
- Both police and the bus company have questioned the driver, who was still in hospital as of last night.
- Carmichael said the driver had made the Philadelphia-to-Toronto run several times before.
- He wouldn't elaborate on the crash investigation, saying the company was still dealing with "very much a fluid situation."

The storm warning was issued for the southern Cape Verde Islands, including Maio, Sao Tiago, Fogo and Brava. Igor does not pose an immediate threat to land. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

BCE BUYS CTV

BELL GETS BACK IN THE GAME AFTER 10 YEARS

For the second time in a decade, BCE Inc. has decided it wants to own CTV Inc. outright — not just the small minority share the Montreal-based telecom giant has held since pulling back from its foray into the Canadian media industry.

BCE's first takeover of Canada's largest private-sector television company in 2000 was part of a wave of mergers that failed to meet the visionaries' hopes for "convergence" of communications connections, media content and electronic commerce in the 21st century.

"We live in a very different era," said Brahm Eiley of Toronto-based Convergence Consulting Group, which has been tracking the convergence of the phone, cable and media industries since the mid-1990s.

In 2000, he said, one of the big questions was whether high-speed, high-capacity broadband networks would catch on.

"We're living in a world where all access is fast enough and cheap

The deal

Some facts about BCE's plan to acquire CTV Inc.:

- ▶ Purchase price of CTV Inc. in 2001: $2.3 billion.
- ▶ Purchase price of CTV Inc. in 2010: $1.3 billion for the 85 per cent that BCE doesn't own.
- ▶ CTV's enterprise value: $3.2 billion ($1.5 billion equity, $1.7 billion debt).
- ▶ What BCE gets in the deal: 27 CTV stations; 30 English and French specialty channels including TSN, RDS, MTV Canada, Space, and Bravo!; rights to streaming online video for TV programs; CHUM Radio's stations; a 15 per cent stake in The Globe and Mail enough that content can be supported."

The competitive landscape has also changed for BCE Inc. and its main subsidiary, Bell Canada. They face not only a bevy of small new players with wireless networks but also large rivals that are embracing video content.

Investors eye sales in U.S.

▶ September always fraught with danger for equity markets, economist says ▶ U.S. back-to-school shopping sales data due out tomorrow

Data-hungry investors on both sides of the border will be keeping an eye on U.S. retail sales this week in the hope the back-to-school shopping season inspired consumers to open their wallets.

RBC is predicting retail sales south of the border rose 0.2 per cent in August, said Paul Ferley, assistant chief economist at RBC Economics. This would compare to an increase of 0.4 per cent in July.

Wariness has characterized data-conscious markets for several weeks now as investors bounce from cheering over good economic news to tearing their hair out over disappointing numbers.

However, the characteristically weak month of September — traditionally the worst month of the year on stock markets — has so far defied expectations. The S&P/TSX composite index is up 1.5 per cent this month, while the Dow Jones industrial average is up an even more impressive 4.5 per cent.

Markets have been boosted this month by upbeat readings on U.S. manufacturing and employment data, and the Bank of Canada confirmed investors' views that the Canadian economy is still relatively healthy by raising its key lending rate a quarter point to one per cent last week.

Investor optimism should continue into this week, said Doug Porter, deputy chief economist at BMO Capital Markets.

Numbers

Data due out this week include Canada's existing home sales for August, expected Wednesday, and the U.S. inflation numbers, due out Friday.

- ▶ Manufacturing. RBC Economic's Paul Ferley expects manufacturing shipments rose 0.4 per cent in July.
- ▶ Home sales. Economists expect Canadian home sales will be down 26 per cent, with average prices down four per cent. U.S. inflation is forecast to rise by 0.3 per cent from July.

Greece reins in belt-tightening measures: PM

► Truckers' strike today set to stifle deliveries of fuel and goods ► Railway unions plan to strike tomorrow

PETROS GIANNAKOPOULOS/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

► George Papandreou

The Greek government is planning no new austerity measures as part of efforts to pull the country out of debt and might even exit international supervision earlier than expected, the prime minister said yesterday.

George Papandreou said Greece was on track to meet targets for reducing its deficit by 40 per cent this year.

"We will not need any new measures," he said a day after making his annual speech on the economy on the sidelines of a trade fair in northern Greece. Papandreou also reiterated that Athens did not plan to restructure its debt — a move he said would have been "catastrophic."

the budget deficit to 8.1 per cent this year from a stunning 13.6 per cent of annual output in 2009.

The tough austerity measures, which included salary cuts and tax hikes, angered labour unions, which have staged six general strikes this year and organized peaceful protests in Thessaloniki Saturday.

But Papandreou pledged that successful implementation of his reform program would ease the pain.

"The faster we proceed with our reforms, the sooner ... we will be able to restore and increase salaries and pensions," he said. "And that is our target."

THE ROUGH ROLE OF A SPORTS REFEREE

Urban Compass

CAROLYN MORRIS

Sal Cancelli sits on the bleachers at an under-11 soccer game in Mimico.

He normally wears black at games — he's been a referee for 40 years and counting — but today he's dressed in jean shorts, a blue striped golf shirt and a navy baseball cap that covers his white hair. His intense gaze focuses on the game as he talks.

Cancelli is the referee co-ordinator for the Toronto Soccer Association. He says it's hard to find refs — the district only retains about 10 to 15 per cent of new recruits. The referee of this game, Ramon Pineda, has been officiating for four seasons, but his linesmen are teenagers working their first summer. Chances are, it will also be their last. Young referees love the game — many have played since they could walk — but the abuse is more than they bargained for.

"It's not an easy job," Cancelli tells me. "You've got 22 little kids running around you, and you have to call a hand ball and you have one side of the parents yelling at you."

Sometimes they do more than just yell. This summer, the parent of an under-13 player in Scarborough allegedly threatened an assistant referee with a gun.

Cancelli hasn't experienced anything that bad, but he's had his moments. He's been chased by a player after a game, had a loonie thrown at him from the stands at the Centennial Park

Stadium — "an extra dollar in my pocket" — and has been called all sorts of ugly names.

Today's game started out calm. The blue team got to halftime with a two-goal lead, but as its white-clad adversary catches up with two goals of its own in the second half, the blue team starts to panic. In a race for the ball, a blue player pushes his opponent from behind. Pineda blows the whistle and throws up a yellow card.

From across the field, Cancelli sees the kid yelling at Pineda — "He's even arguing with the ref!" he says, indignant.

For anyone who needs a good dose of positive reinforcement, this isn't a fitting line of work. Under constant scrutiny, referees are used to getting insults and criticism thrown their way.

"The new generations of referees don't take it," says Cancelli.

When I ask him and Pineda why they do it, they say exercise and love for the sport. And the best feeling?

"When the losing team says I did a good job," says Pineda. Cancelli agrees.

But they don't wait around for that. In today's game, the white team scored a third goal, finishing off the comeback. And no one in blue complimented Pineda.

"This summer, the parent of an under-13 player in Scarborough allegedly threatened an assistant referee with a gun."

TIFF in brief

Oscar-nominated actor Josh Brolin says he and Jason Reitman are discussing a film collaboration.

Online reports suggested Brolin was considering joining Young Man, a film the Montreal-born Reitman is reportedly working on with Charlize Theron.

Brolin said those rumours were likely inspired by the fact that he and Reitman are discussing a different project.

Brolin said it was too early to go into specifics on his collaboration with Reitman.

PHIL BROWN
SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Armed with a beard that would make a hobo proud and a uniquely twisted sense of humour that made him a cult figure for years, Zach Galifianakis has emerged as an unlikely star thanks to The Hangover.

His latest film is quite different from that surprise hit, playing a damaged suicidal depressive in the appropriately titled It's Kind Of A Funny Story. The change of pace was a deliberate choice for the comedian.

"That showbiz town Hollywood or whatever they call it wants to pigeonhole you," admitted Galifianakis. "I did this movie because comedy is very hard and the dramatic stuff is actually a little easier for me. I'm interested in doing a lot of stuff and not just being the chubby bearded guy."

The film also gave Galifianakis the opportunity to work with co-directors Anna Boden and Ryan Fleck, whose dramatic work like Half Nelson he's long admired.

"They're the whole reason that I wanted to do the movie," Galifianakis said. "We met and hit it off after nine beers. To me, it's all about who the director is on a movie. A script can be really well written, but the director really is the key element."

As far as directorial collaborators go, Galifianakis chose his partners well. Boden and Fleck allowed him to go to darker places as an actor than ever before, while also giving him the freedom to infuse the role with his bizarre and unpredictable sense of humour.

Because the film shows audiences a side of his unhinged comedic persona they won't have seen before, it just might increase his newfound level of celebrity, something Galifianakis admits to being uncomfortable about.

"To be quite honest it's a little strange, but I'm older now and I guess I can handle it. When I was doing the underground stuff people didn't bug me as much, but now... I'll put it this way, my 3-year-old niece asked me for $10,000 the other day."

127 Hours has real-life drama

- Incredible tale of survival almost didn't make it to the big screen
- Franco used survivor's own tapes to get to the heart of the character

Adventure-seeker Aron Ralston says he was initially opposed to director Danny Boyle's idea to dramatize the five horrifying days he spent pinned by a boulder in a Utah canyon and the excruciating decision he made to cut off part of his right arm to escape.

The gregarious mountain man said yesterday that he felt a more factual docu-drama would do greater justice to his astonishing survival tale, in which he battled frigid temperatures, thirst and delirium while trapped in the spring of 2003.

But Ralston told a news conference at the Toronto International Film Festival that he came around to supporting the film, 127 Hours, after being convinced that a feature would genuinely portray the horror he went through.

"I basically said, 'Thanks but no thanks,'" Ralston said yesterday of Boyle's initial pitch to make a film about his ordeal.

"And he went on to do Slumdog Millionaire and then very fortunately came (back) and was still interested to do the story ... It was (about) giving it to them and then understanding and trusting, too, that there's more than one way to get to this one goal and you can take this factual path and probably bore everybody to death (or) go about it in a very compelling storytelling manner and reach that same goal of conveying utterly the experience that I went through in a very genuine fashion."

Boyle's 90-minute account largely consists of star James Franco alone on-screen and employs a pulsating soundtrack, saturated colour palette and frenetic cuts to impart a heart-stopping race against time.

Sitting alongside co-stars Amber Tamblyn and Kate Mara, Franco said his performance was largely based on videos Ralston made of himself while in the canyon, and that many of the scenes were shot in long improvised takes.

The Pineapple Express star noted that his biggest physical preparation involved losing weight for the role. He said Ralston provided a detailed account of everything he went through and what he was thinking.

"He even acted it out for us, like just went through the physical motions of it," said Franco, who juggled the intense shoot with graduate studies at New York University.

"The most valuable thing was Aron. The first time I met him in L.A., he brought a tape that had all the videos that he had made in the canyon ... It was gold for an actor."

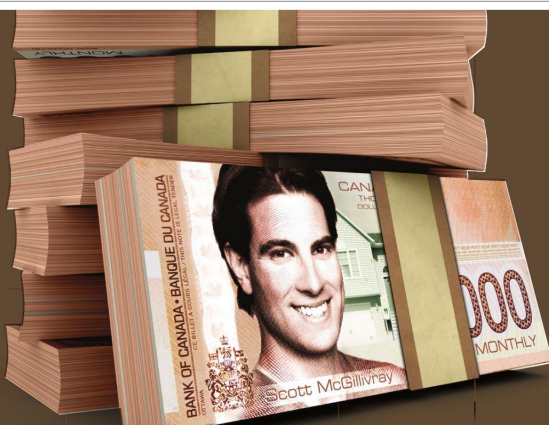

Ralston, who got married just over a year ago and now has a son, said he cried for most of the film the first time he saw it.

"And not because of a pain that I felt but because in a lot of ways it reminds me so effectively of what was so important that I got out of that canyon for. It's the scenes like where you watch the father take his little boy to the edge of this vast canyon landscape to watch the sunrise, which my dad did with me when I was 12 years old," said Ralston, who met his wife after escaping the canyon.

"It's not just this will to live that we have, it's the will to love and that's what I was questing for ... Whenever the film touches on that it touches me in a very deep way."

Noshing with fame

► TIFF dinning is a heavy-weight affair ► Take your pick in Yorkville

KEITH CARMAN
FOR METRO TORONTO

Theatres aren't the only establishments seeing their seats filled during Toronto's 35th annual International Film Festival (TIFF). A sizably salacious portion of the event takes place in other darkened rooms: Hogtown's internationally-renowned eateries.

Whether it be taking time out to reenergize, as a destination to entertain press or commemorate their latest work's successful reception, celebrities are also sampling Toronto's culinary delicacies. It's during these superstar-approved visits that some of our finest eateries have solidified their renown, as a high-profile thumbs-up during TIFF generates the requisite buzz/parazzi/curiosity that follows for an ensuing year. So where exactly are the best bets for some entertainment with your meal?

Expectedly, posh district Yorkville remains a focal point for TIFF dining. Conjecture is that Bistro 990 (990 Bay St., operating with extended hours), Sotto Sotto (116 Avenue Rd.) and Sas-safraz (100 Cumberland St.)

will remain hot, running "business as usual ... but it's great business," as the latter's General Manager Jean-Valéry Lacasse notes. Altering dynamics slightly, however, the festival's new epicentre the Bell Lightbox (330 King St. W) brings attention to the city core, despite TIFF hosting the seventh annual Supper Club up at The Windsor Arms' Prime Restaurant (18 Saint Thomas St.). This event finds Robert DeNiro, Ed Norton, Helena Bonham Carter and Philip Seymour Hoffman enjoying meals from chefs including Food Network's Alex Guarnaschelli.

Back up at festival mainstay Pangaea (1221 Bay St.), co-owner Peter Geary reveals a down-to-earth approach regarding TIFF many restaurants are fostering. They will not be altering their esteemed cuisine at the risk of disappointing patrons.

"We're maintaining our seasonal menu," he states. "If that's what helped build our reputation, we'll stick with it."

Pangaea co-owner Peter Geary notes, sometimes where stars eat at TIFF is more popular than the artists' red carpet appearances.

They're an impromptu place for fans to snag shots and autographs or simply gawk while the glamorous nosh. How will we know where the stars are dining? Thank social networking.

"We know things like Twitter, Facebook and smart phones disseminate information through channels quickly," he states.

"Last year, we had 70 or 80 people standing outside the restaurant by the time of two guests' departure. It will be interesting to see how social networking impacts the event when celebrities come to dine."

This year Clint Eastwood, Robert De Niro and Robert Redford will decorate red carpets around town, but for every walking artifact of Hollywood history there are a dozen rising stars that come to TIFF to bask in the reflected light.

On the short list of TIFF up-and-comers bound for big things are Emma Stone who is sure grab some eyes for her hilarious turn in Easy A, Kat Dennings, the voluptuous seductress of Daydream Nation and former CSI star Lauren Lee Smith, here with a breakout performance in A Night for Dying Tigers. Calling it a "very simple film with complex characters," Smith says "it feels really good to be here with a film I'm proud of."

Buzzed about names from the other side of the camera include Gareth Edwards, the young Brit director here with his micro-budgeted horror film Monsters and Michael Goldbach, the Canadian director of Daydream Nation. His debut film has attracted a lot of attention; already his next script has been optioned by the folks behind Juno and 500 Days Of Summer. "The amazing thing about TIFF is that it has famously been the catalyst for a lot of filmmakers careers," he says. "I'd love to tap into that tradition."

► Lauren Lee Smith has a breakout performance at this year's festival in A Night for Dying Tigers.

A look back

- Years ago director Jason Reitman bought tickets for the festival, but since the one-two-three punch of Thank You For Smoking, Juno and Up in the Air he's now a TIFF breakout star.
- Paul Giamatti was a critically acclaimed supporting actor until TIFF audiences embraced his turn as the oenophile Miles in Sideways.
- Director Eli Roth also rode the festival wave from unknown to flavour of the week with his debut film Cabin Fever.

Tamara Drewe

Genre: Comedy
Director: Stephen Frears
Stars: Gemma Arterton, Roger Allam

 This big screen adaptation of the Guardian comic strip Tamara Drewe sees director Stephen Frears return to the social satire of early work. The story of a successful columnist (Gemma Arterton) who stirs things up in her childhood village of rural Dorset is an amusing distraction with some winning performances — particularly from Arterton who makes the selfish Tamara likeable and Roger Allam as an arrogant novelist — but doesn't pack the punch of some of Frears's other films. It is, however, well cast and eager to please with a sharp, literate script.

● RICHARD CROUSE

John Carpenter's The Ward

Genre: Horror
Director: John Carpenter
Stars: Amber Heard, Jared Harris, Lyndsy Fonseca

★★½
 The release of a new feature film by John Carpenter — dormant since 2001's Ghost of Mars — is no small thing. Would that The Ward were a grand comeback: unfortunately, it's more workmanlike than masterful, plodding through a pretty standard narrative set-up — an institutionalized girl (Amber Heard) sees spooky things wandering the hallways — with only a few fleeting, J-horror-style scares to show for it.

● ADAM NAYMAN

Let Me In

Genre: Horror
Director: Matt Reeves
Stars: Chloe Moretz, Kodi Smit-McPhee

 Let Me In, a remake of the much loved Swedish film Let the Right One In, is a story about two pre-teens

excluded from general society — one by bullies, the other because she's a vampire. Save for its New Mexico setting the film is respectful to its source in all ways but one. In the original the female vampire's body is frozen at twelve years but she has life experience that far exceeds her mortal shell. In the American version Chloe Moretz plays her as much more vulnerable which separates it from the original, but is a less effective, though still evocative, take on the story.

● RICHARD CROUSE

Never Let Me Go

Genre: Drama
Director: Mark Romanek
Stars: Carey Mulligan, Keira Knightley

★★★★½
 Based on an acclaimed novel by Kazuo Ishiguro, Never Let Me Go at first seems like a romantic period piece featuring a love triangle between three youthful leads. However, audiences are shocked when it's quickly revealed the trio was actually raised in a mysterious boarding school for organ donors. Literally raised to die kidney by kidney, Never Let Me Go wraps a tale of sweeping love around the moody, ominous moral horror. It's all about atmosphere here and Mark Romanek (One Hour Photo) manages to capture a stunning looker while Carey Mulligan and Keira Knightley deliver the goods ... so to speak.

● STEVE GOW

Everything Must Go

Genre: Comedy/Drama
Director: Dan Rush
Stars: Will Ferrell, Rebecca Hall, Stephen Root

 Will Ferrell stars as a recently fired ad exec who returns home to find that his wife has changed the locks and spread all of his belongings over the front lawn. So, he turns the lawn into a living room and starts to regress into alcoholism while starring down his nose neighbours. The film starts well, but quickly retreats into tired indie comedy clichés once Ferrell befriends a local teen whom he initially plans to exploit for cheap labour, but soon learns a new perspective on life through the boy's innocence (eck!). Ferrell's sad clown routine is fine, but he's no Bill Murray and is better suited to absurdist humour the melancholic comedy.

● PHIL BROWN

127 Hours

Genre: Drama
Director: Danny Boyle
Stars: James Franco, Amber Tamblyn, Kate Mara

 A riveting portrayal of hiker Aron Ralston's true-life nightmare when he got trapped under a rock in a secluded canyon in 2003 and was forced to cut off his own arm to survive. That decision came after days of isolation and director Danny Boyle's ever-moving cameras capture every moment of Ralston's painful struggle and dehydrated hallucination with James Franco providing possibly a career-best performance as Ralston. Considering that the film is primarily about one man and a rock, Boyle does an extraordinary job of making his movie endlessly suspenseful and emotionally devastating. Sure to be one of the most visceral cinematic experiences of the year and not to be ignored by the squeamish (it's worth it).

● PHIL BROWN

The Man of a Thousand Songs

Genre: Documentary
Director: William D. MacGillivray
Stars: Ron Hynes, Joel Thomas Hynes, Amelia Curran

 The Man of a Thousand Songs is essentially one East Coast veteran saluting another, with the venerable Newfoundland director William D. MacGillivray profiling folk singer Ron Hynes. As a portrait of a volatile artist consumed by his own appetites, the film is compelling (if fairly standard); as a showcase for its subject's rough, distinctive voice, it's mesmerizing. Hynes is perfectly candid talking about his life and times (and flaws) but his songs are more loquacious than his confessions.

● ADAM NAYMAN

Buried

Genre: Thriller
Director: Rodrigo Cortés
Stars: Ryan Reynolds

 Buried begins with a Blair Witch close-up — all eyes and nose — of star Ryan Reynolds. We learn he is a civilian truck driver in Iraq who was taken hostage, buried underground with a cellphone, who will be left to die unless a ransom is paid. Bleak and claustrophobic, Buried feels like one idea stretched to feature length despite inventive work from director Rodrigo Cortés and a revelatory central performance from Reynolds. Unable to rely on his usual comic timing and bulging muscles Reynolds hits a career high, keeping us intrigued for most, but not all of the ninety minute running time. ● RICHARD CROUSE

Heartbeats

Genre: Drama
Director: Xavier Dolan
Stars: Xavier Dolan, Niels Schneider, Monia Chokri

 Dully ostentatious where his 2009 debut I Killed My Mother was charmingly precocious, Xavier Dolan's Heartbeats is an exercise in self-indulgence: even the most sympathetic viewer will cringe when the writer-director star is informed by another character that he's a "cute kid." He is — and so is Niels Schneider, who plays the curly junior Adonis who comes between Dolan's moody hipster and his best gal pal (Monia Chokri) — but what should be a sexy screwball farce suffocates beneath a mountain of pre-fab angst and anxious, faux-virtuosic technique.

● ADAM NAYMAN

I Wish I Knew

Genre: Documentary
Director: Jia Zhangke
Stars: Zhao Tao, Lim Giong, Lin Xudong

 Jia Zhangke's last film, 24 City, was about the difficulty of locating a personal perspective within Chinese history. His follow-up, I Wish I Knew, continues the project while narrowing its scope to a single city — Shanghai. Contrasting archival footage with contemporary images captured by the great cinematographer Yin Luk-wai, Jia locates the city as the epicentre of an entire country's social and economic upheaval. This is less a documentary than a cinematic essay, and it's heady, rewarding stuff.

Awards, antics at VMAs

► Lady Gaga caps off record 13 VMA nominations by sweeping every category ► Taylor Swift forgives Kanye West for last year's speech fiasco — in song ► Host Chelsea Handler, Jackass cast put rowdy spin on the night

► Lady Gaga, centre, arrives in an Alexander McQueen gown at the MTV Video Music Awards in Los Angeles last night. The outrageous singer picked up the biggest prize of the night wearing another outfit sure to anger the PETA-crowd: a dress and chapeau that appeared to be made of cuts of meat.

Taylor Swift has absolved Kanye West of last year's onstage sin with one sombre song.

The 20-year-old delivered a poignant and powerful ode about West at last night's MTV Video Music Awards in Los Angeles that instead of criticizing him, sympathized with his difficult time in the spotlight and West's own admissions that his ego has often gotten in his own way.

"Thirty-two and still growing up now; who you are is not what you did," she sang softly, adding: "You're still an innocent."

Swift's dramatic performance delivered on the hype promised from a sequel to last year's incident when West marred Swift's acceptance speech for best female video by jumping onstage and insisting the award should have gone to Beyoncé. In the aftermath, West endured intense backlash, despite an apology, as well as a serious dent in his career that has yet to be ironed out.

Last week on Twitter, West poured out his heart, again apologizing to Swift and saying how much he had suffered since the incident, and adding that he had grown.

While Swift is known for skewering those who have done her wrong, for West, she offered an olive branch with her song, written earlier this year.

The Swift-West pathos overshadowed the typical VMA antics.

The cast of Jackass got rowdy early on when one vealed his underwear — made to look like a chicken, with one suggestive part.

Host Chelsea Handler also added to the bawdiness. A pre-taped portion of her opening featured the host getting spanked multiple times by show participants backstage before running into the recently freed

Lindsay Lohan, who also gave her a swat.

Lady Gaga — who set a VMA record with her 13 nominations — was awarded best female video and best dance video for Bad Romance and best collaboration for her miniseries Telephone, featuring Beyoncé.

Alice Love

"This belt is out of this world! Feels like all the weight is taken off of you and you just feel light. Pain pills only mask the pain. Now that we have the belt I can be pain free. I have a grandson, who loves to be picked up. But you don't realize how much pressure that puts on your back. With my belt, I don't have to worry about picking him up!"

P.J. Lemieux

The belt is very comfortable and it helps to take the stress off my lower back. I feel that I now have better posture and I see how that is very beneficial. I can see this being used by people with chronic back pain and its pharmaceutical free and so easy to do. You just strap on the belt, inflate and you can feel it work right away because it takes the stress off the lower back. You've got nothing to lose if you suffer from back pain. Definitely this is worth trying!

Mark

"It feels like it's being stretched out, it feels great, it feels good. The stretching is relieving some pain. My back would usually be sore in the lower back, but I'm not feeling any pain, which is unusual and is great. Generally at this point my lower back would feel sore but, it feels great! I could stand here all day and hit balls."

Call me Canuck comedy

► HBO betting big on Canadian comedy and Canadian stars with Call Me Fitz ► Premieres next Sunday night

Jason Priestley gives used car salesmen an even badder name in the new comedy series Call Me Fitz.

As the hard-drinking, embezzling, egomaniacal womanizer Richard Fitzpatrick, Priestley obliterates all lingering thoughts of him as likable teen Brandon Walsh on Beverly Hills 90210.

"Roles like Fitz just aren't written that often. So when you read one — you jump at it," Priestley enthused during a recent trip to Toronto. "Hell, I fought for the part. I went in and auditioned. And thankfully my ideas on the character jibed with (creator) Sheri Ellwood."

In the series opener — premiering Sunday, Sept. 19 on HBO Canada — Fitz's debauched life unravels when a test drive leaves a customer in a coma.

Returning to work, Fitz finds new competition in Larry (Ernie Grunwald), who claims to be his conscience.

Larry says it's his job to get Fitz' life back on track — if that's even possible with the morally-bankrupt salesman.

"It's a real fine line

"Even if you don't like him, you have to understand his motivations. That allows you to laugh."

Call Me Fitz is already a hit — of sorts.

Filming of the second season has good trick, eh?" laughs Priestley.

"The first season turned out really well. But we still need people to watch it now."

Priestley, who also helmed two episodes of Call Me Fitz, has in recent years become a TV director-for-hire on shows like The Secret Life of The American Teenager and 7th Heaven.

"Being able to jump between acting and directing, I think makes me better on both sides of the camera," he says.

Priestley even di-

Need to know

How the show shakes down:

► His conscience Larry (Ernie Grunwald) shows up on the Fitzpatrick lot intent on rehabilitating Fitz's battered psyche and the entire Fitz family's sleazy way of life.

► No easy task This is not as easy as he'd hoped, as daily events include impromptu porn shoots, black market kidney trading, sniper shakedowns, cowboy themed bachelor parties, long nights in the drunk tank and more brain damaged sex than even Fitz can handle. It's all in a day's work at Fitzpatrick Motors.

► This season The Canadian comedy has shot 13 episodes for this, the first season.

► The next season 13 more episodes have already been ordered for Call Me Fitz.

terested in his old 90210 war stories.

"Hey — it's been a lot of years. I think most of the actors are too young and never saw me in the original show."

Call Me Fitz airs Sunday night on HBO Canada.

Two new thumbs up

► Film critic returns to TV in new role on Roger Ebert Presents At the Movies

Film critic Roger Ebert, who lost his ability to speak and eat after cancer surgeries, said Friday that he is returning to television on a movie review show that he is producing for public television.

And, Ebert says, the thumbs up and thumbs down reviews made famous with his late partner Gene Siskel will return.

"This is the rebirth of a dream," Ebert said in a statement.

The Pulitzer Prize-winning Chicago Sun-Times film critic is producing Roger Ebert Presents At the Movies with his wife, Chaz Ebert. The weekly, half-hour review program will debut in January and be syndicated nationally on public television stations.

"(Roger Ebert) felt that there's still a need for a straight forward movie review show to tell you whether or not a critic thinks the movies are worth seeing."

The show will feature co-host Christy Lemire of The Associated Press and contributing critic Elvis Mitchell of National Public Radio and former movie critic for The New York Times. Ebert will have his own segment on the show called Roger's Office, during which he will use his computer voice to review new movies or talk about the state of film.

"(Roger Ebert) felt that there's still a need for a straight forward movie review show to tell you whether or not a critic thinks the movies are worth seeing," Chaz Ebert said in an interview. "Christy and Elvis sat in for Roger at various times in his absence and we thought they were smart and vibrant and exciting critics."

Earlier this year, Disney-ABC cancelled Ebert's At the Movies.

Standing up to cancer

► Celebs help raise research money in Stand Up to Cancer telethon
► 2008 telethon raised $100M

Actresses Sofia Vergara and Christina Applegate were among the numerous celebrity cancer survivors cramming the red carpet Friday leading into the second Stand Up To Cancer telethon.

Modern Family star Vergara, 38, talked about beating thyroid cancer, which was diagnosed about 10 years ago.

"Well, I think cancer for me was a very hard experience in my life, because I was young and I had my kid," said the Colombian actress. "But I think it was also very good, because I changed the way I live my life. I think now I don't sweat the small stuff anymore. It makes you realize, it makes you change your priorities in life. ► Disgraced British monarch to star in six-part series on the new Oprah Winfrey Network

Duchess of York Sarah Ferguson is coming to the Oprah Winfrey Network (OWN) next year.

The network announced Friday that Ferguson will star in a six-part reality series called Finding Sarah.

On the series, Ferguson plans to open up about her lifelong battles with weight, relationships and finances as she shares with viewers her struggle to rebuild her life.

"I'm doing this because I need to heal my mind, body and spirit," Ferguson said in a press release.

Ferguson, 50, is the ex-wife of Britain's Prince Andrew, the second son of Queen Elizabeth II.

She was caught in an embarrassing British newspaper sting in May in which she was filmed appearing to ask for, and accept, $40,000 in cash in exchange for access to Prince Andrew, who is also a British trade envoy.

Gaga's over her personal bad romance

► Lawsuit dismissed by producer and old flame on The Fame album

They may have had a bad romance, but now there's an amicable professional split between Lady Gaga and a music producer who said she ditched him after he helped launch her career.

Court papers filed this week show the Bad Romance singer and songwriter-producer Rob Fusari agreed to dismiss the lawsuits each filed against the other in March.

He'd sought $30.5 million, but it's unclear whether they made any monetary deal. Lawyers on both sides didn't respond to messages Friday. Fusari had said he co-wrote Paparazzi and Beautiful, Dirty, Rich, came up with her stage name and helped get her record deal. He said he'd gotten about $611,000 but was due far more. Bono does whatever a spider can: Look out!

► Superhero-based musical in works for seven years ► U2's Broadway tracks draw from many genres

Bono and the Edge wrote the music for the upcoming Broadway production SPIDER-MAN Turn Off the Dark, and a new song previewed from the production Friday sounds like it could be part of the U2 catalogue.

But the musical's director, Julie Taymor, says the pair create a sound that is more than a typical rock concert.

"They have gone way beyond what I thought any rock musicians would do because they're really serious storytellers and they get it, and they get the world of music that they can draw from. They're not frightened of it," Taymor said. "It's not like they have to put their U2 stamp on everything. There's real orchestral, ballads and ancient music and it's just drawn from many sources to support the story. It's amazing."

Bono and the Edge pre-viewed the song Boy Falls From the Sky from SPIDER-MAN on ABC's Good Morning America via satellite while on tour. The song was performed by the rock band Carney at the Hudson Theatre; its lead singer, Reeve Carney, stars in the musical as Spiderman and the rest of his band is part of the musical as well.

Taymor said the story of this Spiderman is different than what many grew up reading in comic books, including a love triangle involving Spiderman's alter-ego Peter Parker's girlfriend, Mary Jane. The musical is set to open on Broadway in late December.

- ▶ Full of surprises, celebrations and celebrity guests

The 25th and final season of The Oprah Winfrey Show starts airing today and the talk show host says she plans to focus on the people she thinks are responsible for the show's success: The viewers.

"This year you will see lots of surprises for other people, dreams coming true for other people, really honouring the essence of what has made this show work for the past 25 years and that's the viewer," Winfrey said.

"The last season is a celebration of the past 24 years. For me, it is about holding a place of reverence and honour for the people who made this possible for me: That would be the viewers."

This week, Winfrey will host country music stars The Judds and revisit the city of Williamson, W. Va., where she filmed a town hall episode about AIDS in 1987. On Friday, she will announce her first book club selection in a year.

Winfrey is set to launch her Oprah Winfrey Network, or OWN, on cable Jan. 1. The end of The Oprah Winfrey Show will be featured on that network with Behind the Scenes: Oprah's 25th Season, a one-hour series giving viewers a look at the making of the last season of Winfrey's talk show.

Winfrey describes her show, which is syndicated to 145 countries, as having a cultural impact on her viewers around the world.

Shatner's steely nerve

► Family inspires chat host's style
► Candid sitdowns with likes of Kelsey Grammer and Tim Allen

William Shatner didn't have much formal experience as an interviewer prior to the launch of his chat show, so the 79-year-old prepared for William Shatner's Raw Nerve by calling upon his experience as a dad.

"It comes with having a family and getting people to talk about themselves at the family table," Shatner said during an interview. "And we used to joke, my kids and I, about how if there wasn't somebody crying at the end of the meal — and not out of rage, but out of something meaningful — it wasn't a good meal."

It's with that spirit that Shatner approaches Raw Nerve, a chatfest in which he tries to steer his celebrity subjects away from the comfortable and into sensitive areas they'd probably rather not explore on TV.

The first season of the show debuted in Canada yesterday on the Biography Channel.

"My impulse was to find something about that celebrity that even they themselves hadn't thought about either ever or in a long while," the Montreal native said. "And that they would feel confident enough to reveal themselves a little bit more than they have in the past. And I felt that I could effect that because I was speaking to them on their own grounds.

"I had no agenda, I wished not to hurt them, I didn't want to do any tabloid stuff. I very specifically kept away from tabloid matters and talked about things of the heart."

Though each episode of the show is 22 minutes long, Shatner says the interviews all took at least an hour, and he eased his subjects into a comfort zone by focusing on banal topics that wouldn't necessarily make the final cut.

► Recent survey shows majority of kids are concerned about nutrition and healthy eating ► 90 per cent said they look to their parents for guidance

Preteen children aren't as interested in consuming greasy fast food and sugary treats as previously thought, new research released Thursday indicates.

In fact, the majority of kids under age 13 are concerned about nutrition and healthy eating, according to a survey conducted earlier this year. And almost 90 per cent of kids surveyed say they actually care about what their parents do and say when it comes to healthy eating; they are still interested in guidance and support from their parents.

"This new research sends a powerful message and call to action from kids that the combined influence of parents, teachers and schools gives them the best chance to succeed in practising healthy eating," says Heidi Boyd, a registered dietitian with

"Parents need to model healthy eating and the teachers need to ensure they are not giving 'mixed messages' by teaching healthy eating and then modeling poor habits."

Dairy Farmers of Canada, the agency that sponsored the research. "The advice from kids is clear and now it's up to parents and teachers to respond."

Salad perfect for end of summer

► Teriyaki salad packs a punch ► Simple, quick and so flavourful you can hold the dressing

The goal here is a flavour-jammed salad that is simple, speedy and so good you don't even need a dressing.

Start out by marinating thinly sliced beef in a power-packed marinade of teriyaki sauce, hoisin, cider vinegar, sugar and hot sauce.

Eye round roast is a good choice for the beef, but feel free to use any steak or other cut that will handle being thinly sliced and briefly grilled.

The beef can sit in the marinade for as little or as long as you like. Once you pull it out, it goes on and off the grill in about two minutes. Throw it over some chopped romaine and sprinkle with crumbled blue cheese and you pretty much need nothing else.

But if you want to add some crunch, some purchased croutons would be a nice addition.

Ingredients:

- 125 ml (1/2 cup) prepared teriyaki sauce or marinade
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) hoisin sauce
- 30 ml (2 tbsp) cider vinegar
- 15 ml (1 tbsp) sugar
- 7 ml (1 1/2 tsp) hot sauce
- 750 g (1 1/2 lb) eye round roast, trimmed of fat and cut into 5-mm (1/4-inch) slices
- 2 large hearts of romaine, roughly chopped
- 125 ml (1/2 cup) crumbled blue cheese
- 250 ml (1 cup) halved cherry or grape tomatoes

Preparation:

- 1 In a medium bowl, whisk together teriyaki, hoisin, vinegar, sugar and hot sauce. Add steak, turning to coat well, then cover and refrigerate for 30 minutes.

► Each serving of this salad has about 300 calories and 10 grams of fat.

- 2 Meanwhile, arrange lettuce on four serving plates.

- 3 Heat grill to high. Coat grates with cooking spray.

- 4 Use tongs to transfer steak, leaving as much of the marinade clinging to it as possible, to the grill. Cook for 1 to 2 minutes per side.

- 5 Divide steak among serving plates over lettuce. Sprinkle with blue cheese. Divide tomato halves among salads.

PIETER LAGA INVENTOR OF PETAL DROP

Do you find it more of a challenge to design eco friendly gadgets?

Yes! I believe that when you are creating an ecological gadget every step of the process should be as eco friendly as possible. This means not only the materials you choose but also the fabrication process, packaging and post-life.

Are people conscious of the fact that even the accessories they buy, can be harmful to the environment? More and more... I can see a real shift of thinking.

What is your dream ecological technology product?

The perfect battery, compact, powerful, eco-friendly to manufacture and easy to recycle.

What inspired the petal drop?

Petal drops was inspired by nature itself. I was playing with the idea of rainwater — the fact that rainwater is better for your plants than tap water — and a way to collect it. Using a bottle was a next logical step. I only wasn't sure about the shape... until I thought of how for some plant species their leaves guide water to the roots. You can say form followed function. Actually, at the time it was raining for three weeks in a row in Belgium. Maybe this was part of the inspiration!

Which materials are the most environmentally friendly? Using recycled materials is an important step.

PICKING PETALS

Rainy days are about to get sunny thanks to the flower shaped funnel "Petal Drop," made from 100 per cent recycled HDPE plastic.

Designed to fit on a plastic bottle screw top in order to collect rainwater as it falls, the petal drop will allow you to use recycled water to then use on your thirsty garden plants, wash down dirty surfaces or give your pet a bath. The material is light, so the best thing is to place it down with heavy pebbles.

QUESTION:
Is there such a thing as a safe non-stick pan?

Mary from Ottawa

There are safer alternatives to frying pans and cookware coated with perfluorooctanoic acid (PFOA) — a key chemical found in Teflon. Try cooking with stainless steel, glass, ceramic or cast iron instead. Dupont, one of the eight major manufacturers of PFOA, plans to phase out the chemical by 2015. The good news is that you can start now! And you should.

Aside from choosing safer cookware, you can reduce your exposure by avoiding consumer products coated with non-stick chemicals. These include some types of dental floss, microwave popcorn bags, windshield cleaning solution and even pizza boxes. Also, watch for products that maybe appear safe but have non-stick inserts, like rice cookers.

Most pans get too hot in our day-to-day cooking, releasing PFOA and other toxic substances. Then as they age and wear the coating can flake off into our food. PFOA is a suspected carcinogen and hormone disruptor that we know stays in the body and our environment forever. About 95 per cent of us have PFOA in our bloodstream, including newborn infants. It has also been detected in marine animals and our cherished polar bears.

Before you ditch your scratched-up frying pan, check out your city's recycling guidelines or give its recycling hotline a call. Old non-stick pots and pans cannot be placed in your blue bin.

Chances are you will need to drop them off at a depot that accepts scrap metal.

With safer alternatives out there, Teflon-coated cookware just isn't worth the risk. Switch to more eco-friendly options today.

THERE ARE BETTER OPTIONS THAN NON-STICK COOKWARE

i MiEV
Mitsubishi Innovative Electric Vehicle

Drive@earth

For us, the finish line is just the beginning.

See what happened on the tour @ CleanAcrossCanada.ca

It's been 28 days and over 7500 km since the Mitsubishi i-MiEV (Mitsubishi Innovative Electric Vehicle) left Cape Spear Lighthouse National Historic Site in St. John's, Newfoundland and Labrador, the most easterly point in Canada, and travelled clean across Canada on its way to the Electric Vehicle Conference in Vancouver, British Columbia. By reaching "mile 0" of the Trans-Canada Highway in Victoria, British Columbia, Mitsubishi has become the world's first automotive manufacturer of an electric car to travel across Canada.

An electric car was never meant to travel such great distances, but we made it by travelling up to 120 km at a time - using the i-MiEV's 16 kWh lithium-ion battery - and we arrived in style. In addition to meeting many great people along the way, we learned a lot as we spread the word about the viable, reliable and ecological future of zero emission driving that is now a reality and no longer just a possibility.

We would like to thank all of our sponsors and partners for their support throughout our tour.

If you missed seeing us on our travels, check out all the blog posts, pictures and videos from the tour at CleanAcrossCanada.ca

► Smartphones, mobile applications allow you to carry on business as usual when on the go ► Cut down roaming rates with special packages

Mobile technology is rapidly transforming business travel — for the better. Broadband networks, feature-rich smartphones and an explosion of mobile applications now deliver useful information and tools to your fingertips, making it easier for you to get from A to B and back.

"Business travellers want to make their time away from the office as worry-free as possible," said Gordon Stein, vice president, Rogers Business Segment.

"The right mobile technologies can offer convenience and productivity so that you can stay connected with colleagues, manage office responsibilities and address client needs while away."

Here are some smart travel tips to consider when your business takes you on the road:

- Eliminate the uncertainty of roaming fees — If you travel regularly, ask your service provider about plans like Rogers One Rate that allow you to pay for a single allotment of voice or data to use anywhere in Canada or the U.S. and pool your data with co-workers travelling along with you.

If you're an occasional traveler, a one-time purchase of a voice, text or data package will let you talk, text and surf in many worldwide destinations.

- Connect when and where you need it — Searching for Wi-Fi or Ethernet networks can be a hassle when travelling for business.

Save time and stay connected wherever you are with a high-speed mobile internet solution like an embedded laptop from Rogers, which provides a mobile office with its built-in connectivity.

- Take your travel resources mobile — There are many mobile applications that can increase the convenience and reduce the uncertainty of business travel like the Cortado Print and Fax app that lets you to print, scan and fax documents from your smartphone, or the SalesNow CRM app that helps you manage contacts and deals, and view sales funnels and forecasts. Personal touch, remotely

► New tech making mobile working more efficient ► Tips to feel like you're in office even when you're not

Modern laptops, wireless internet access and advances in communication hardware/software are making remote working easier and more efficient than ever.

With the technology available to support mobile working, small businesses can take advantage in order to gain a competitive edge and retain top employees.

"There are many benefits to working remotely — no lengthy commuting, fewer distractions, and the flexibility of working whenever and wherever you choose," said Gordon Stein, vice president, Rogers Business Segment.

"Time is a valuable commodity for small business owners, and our customers are looking for every advantage for their business. We enable our customers to stay connected to the information that is important while away from the office — whether it is voice and email messages, production information or real-time feeds from their operation."

Consider these tips to make working remotely feel less remote:

Stay connected

Your internet connection is your lifeline to staying connected. A mobile internet connection from devices like the Rocket mobile Internet stick or the Rocket hub is a great way to access high-speed connectivity on the go without needing to constantly search for Wi-Fi hotspots.

► These days, you can carry your office with you wherever you go.

Feel like you're in the office even when you're not

Remote access software lets you access documents and files through an internet connection, which means the work doesn't have to stop just because you are out of the office.

Getting in tune with the Bronfman family

Book review

Fortune's Fool
By Fred Goodman
Simon & Schuster,
286 pages, $36.00

Behind every billionaire, lies a very interesting story. Take for example the Bronfman family, a feuded tale of a clan who got their start in the dodgy business of liquor sales during the time of prohibition. Fast forward a few decades later, and you have a business lead by Edgar Bronfman under the new tutelage of Seagram and a stellar jewel of a head office, The Seagram Building on Park Avenue.

Fred Goodman's book, which is actually a story about the music business and the purchase by Edgar Bronfman Jr. of Warner Music Group, paints a salacious tale of a family of heirs gunning to outdo their predecessors, ultimately dismantling an empire with about as much sentimentality as they showed in the selling of the Seagram building in 1978 for a cool $75 million. "Everything at Seagram, no matter how singular or closely tied to the Bronfman family legend, was for sale at the right price". There is no arguing that the music business is not what it used to be. The confusion comes when a billionaire takes a (seemingly) losing bet on an industry to the tune of a few billion dollars, divesting some very solid Dupont stock to boot.

This book takes a close look at the intensity shown by Edgar Bronfman Jr. in trying to remake the music industry an Internet-friendly business, including controversial 360 artist agreements that take revenue cuts from streams formally exclusive to the artists.

All arguments aside, the company's profits have improved (though slightly) and by and large they do have a lead in digital sales for the industry. A true tale that reads like fiction.

Renting nightmares

► University students raise leasing concerns ► Always check agreement and know your rights, experts advise

Something was very wrong with the house David Molenhuis had rented just months earlier with three university buddies in London, Ont.

"We came back and the landlord had built a house onto the back of it," recalls Molenhuis, 28, a part-time student now living in Ottawa and national chair of the Canadian Federation of Students.

Like a number of renters, Molenhuis has his share of rental nightmares, but it's his experience while attending the University of Western Ontario in 2003-04 that stands out for all the wrong reasons.

"Where the windows were, you opened them up and there was insulation in them," he says. "Pink insulation staring me in the face. (They) didn't take out the windows, just built a house right up against ours."

Years later and still dishing out rent, Molenhuis says he's become more vigilant before signing a lease and encourages young, inexperienced prospective tenants to do the same before getting the keys to their first place.

"We're a clear target for property management companies in university towns," he says.

While legislation governing tenants and landlords varies by province, industry experts say there are steps all renters can take to protect themselves from coast to coast.

"Get a copy of your lease, make sure you pay your rent on time," says

► David Molenhuis, national chair of the Canadian Federation of Students, has had his share of renting woes.

Martha Lewis, a spokeswoman for the Tenant Resource and Advisory Centre in Vancouver.

"When you're looking for a place, if you have a bad feeling about it, then don't rent it. You're probably right to have that bad feeling."

Lewis says renters should communicate with their landlord clearly — and in writing — to avoid confusion when conflicts arise.

Cole Webber, a community legal worker with Dalhousie legal aid in Halifax, also suggests doing basic background research on the landlord.

A few clicks on Google could reveal a host of horror stories or heaps of praise.

A number of renters in Halifax, a city teeming with university and college students needing a place to live, have posted personal stories on a Facebook page dubbed Halifax Landlords: the Good and the Bad.

"It's important for people to know what rights they don't have under current legislation," says Webber, who has represented tenants at residential tenancy board hearings.

Molenhuis says he and his roommates fought their landlord at a housing tribunal and were awarded about $500 for the inconvenience of construction, which he says took place while they were subletting the property. Molenhuis argues it was a pithy sum considering they had to stick it out in a "radically altered" property they hadn't signed up for.

While Molenhuis says he's happy to know there are resources available to renters, he believes the system in Ontario is in need of change.

"We were just taken for a big ride and given nothing for it," he says.

Molenhuis says he would like to see a bill of rights for tenants, particularly students. He says the demand for housing breeds bad practices on the part of landlords.

Of course, not all renters — regardless of age — are perfect tenants, either.

"There are bad apples in both barrels," says John Dickie, the president of the Canadian Federation of Apartment Associations and a longtime lawyer dealing in landlord and tenant law. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The other side

Some advice from John Dickie, president of the Canadian Federation of Apartment Associations.

- Communication between the property manager and the tenant can save a lot of grief.
- Landlords should be clear with prospective tenants about the building's rules. Tenants should take care of the property and report the need for repairs.
- He says students tasting household freedom for the first time don't always know how to handle it. "The issue is knowing what one is supposed to do to fit in with the new environment," says Dickie.

Books to win over kids' hearts, imaginations

► Five titles up for TD Canadian Children's Literature Award ► From dragons to Victorian villians, books have range of literature for kids

When it comes to stirring the imagination of children, there's nothing like a good book.

Earlier this year, The Canadian Children's Book Centre (CCBC) and TD Bank Financial Group announced the 2010 finalists for the TD Canadian Children's Literature Award.

This annual award recognizes excellence in Canadian children's literature and the author of the winning book will be awarded $25,000 for the most distinguished book of the year.

Not only do these books make an excellent reading list vetted by some of Canada's top children's literature professionals, this year's top five titles will captivate the hearts and imaginations of children and adults everywhere, resulting in an enjoyable (and educational) read for everyone involved. These authors introduce readers to a variety of new adventures from dragons, magic and Victorian villains, to a heartwarming coming-of-age narrative.

According to Charlotte Teeple, the executive director of The Canadian Children's Book Centre, "The books chosen as finalists for the TD Canadian Children's Literature Awards exemplify some of the best work by Canadian children's authors and illustrators."

You can visit your local library or bookstore to pick up one of the English-language finalists for the 2010 TD Canadian Children's Literature Awards:

- Dragon Seer by Janet McNaughton, HarperCollins, ages 11 and up
- Home Free by Sharon Jennings, Second Story Press, ages 10 – 13
- The Hunchback Assignments by Arthur Slade, HarperCollins, ages 11 and up
- A Thousand Years of Pirates by William Gilkerson, Tundra Books, ages 10 – 14
- Watching Jimmy by Nancy Hartry, Tundra Books, ages 12 and up

Ay Caramba!

In a special world where cats can fly, there's only one who cannot — Caramba. A shy, quiet tomcat, Caramba wishes he could take flight with the others, but hasn't been able to master this gift.

When his fear of being different pushes him to secretly practice on his own, Caramba makes an amazing discovery, learning just how special being different can be.

This year, more than 500,000 grade one students will receive copies of the heartwarming story of Caramba courtesy of the TD Grade One Book Giveaway, the largest free book distribution program to school-aged children in Canada.

Caramba author and illustrator Marie-Louise Gay has produced 40 picture books and has won nearly every major Canadian children's literary prize — some of them even twice! The captivating story and beautiful illustrations in Caramba are just some of the reasons that The Canadian Children's Book Centre (CCBC), in conjunction with TD Bank Financial Group, has chosen this special book for their annual TD Grade One Book Giveaway initiative.

"We're excited that children across the country will get a chance to explore the special world of Caramba," says Frank McKenna, TD's Deputy Chair and Literacy Champion. "This story will hopefully teach children to recognize their own special talents, and encourage a love of reading." NEWS CANADA

Lind's heroics give Jays walk-off win

DARREN CALABRESE/THE CANADIAN PRESS

► Toronto Blue Jays Adam Lind avoids an inside pitch yesterday from Tampa Bay Rays starter Jeff Niemann.

► Toronto makes progress with 8-10 record in season series with Rays

5	4
BLUE JAYS	RAYS

The Toronto Blue Jays certainly didn't solve all their problems against the Tampa Bay Rays in 2010. Not even close, actually.

But by posting an 8-10 mark in the season series against a division rival that has certainly seemed to have their number in recent years, they've shown signs of progress and given themselves something to build off.

Yesterday's dramatic 5-4 victory over the American League wild-card leaders, capped by Adam Lind's two-run homer in the bottom of the ninth, was the latest example of that. In a game marked by many of the things that typically go wrong for the Blue Jays (73-70) against the Rays (86-56), they still found a way to win before a crowd of 14,658.

"I think it shows about myself and about this team how hard we've played all year and how we haven't given up," said Lind, who added he had never put a ball in play against Rays closer Rafael Soriano before. "You play them so much, you've got to beat them if you want to get to the playoffs."

"I think we're learning how to do that."

The Blue Jays were 4-14 last year and 7-11 in 2008 versus the Rays, and will need to continue their improvement if they hope to leapfrog Tampa Bay in the AL East. THE CANADIAN PRESS

The future arrives

- The Toronto Blue Jays are bringing up Kyle Drabek, the crown jewel of their farm system.
- The right-hander, a key part of the Roy Halladay trade last winter, will start Wednesday at Baltimore.
- Drabek's promotion comes after the Jays decided to move to a six-man rotation for the rest of the season.
- Drabek is also expected to start Sept. 22 against Seattle and Sept 28 against the Yankees, both in Toronto.

Rain pushes men's Open final to Monday

MARK HUMPHREY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The U.S. Open men's final between Rafael Nadal and Novak Djokovic was postponed because of rain yesterday, marking the third consecutive year the season's last Grand Slam tournament won't finish on schedule.

Nadal and Djokovic were supposed to begin playing at 4:30 p.m. yesterday, but showers began more than 90 minutes earlier and hadn't stopped by 6:15 p.m., when tournament officials decided to call it a night.

They rescheduled the match to start no earlier than 4 p.m. today.

Djokovic probably didn't mind the wait until today. That's because he reached the final with a gruelling five-set victory over Roger Federer Saturday, while Nadal won his earlier semifinal in straight sets. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Sports in brief

Tiger to miss FedEx finale

GOLF. For the first time in his career, Tiger Woods won't be playing a tournament because he's not invited.

Woods got off to a rugged start yesterday in the BMW Championship and shot 1-under 70, leaving him too far back to get into the top 30 in the FedEx Cup standings and qualify for the playoff finale at the Tour Championship.

Stafford suffers shoulder injury

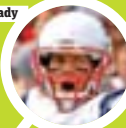

NFL. Detroit Lions QB Matthew Stafford's status for the next game is uncertain after he left the season opener against Chicago with a right shoulder injury following a blindside sack by the Bears' Julius Peppers. Shaun Hill started the third quarter in place of Stafford, whose arm was in a sling as he stood on the sidelines. The Lions would not say if he had X-rays. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

- 1 Tom Brady threw two of his three touchdown passes to Wes Welker to lead New England to a 38-24 win over the Cincinnati Bengals.
- 2 David Garrard threw three touchdown passes, two to tight end Mercedes Lewis, as Jacksonville beat Denver 24-17 in a season opener the Jaguars called one of the most important in franchise history.
- 3 Karlos Dansby wasted little time making an impression as the centrepiece of the Miami Dolphins' new-look defence. Opening with a sack three plays into a 15-10 season-opening win over Bills, the linebacker finished his debut with a team-leading eight tackles in helping limit Buffalo to a mere 166 yards.
- 4 Aaron Rodgers threw a pair of touchdown passes, Mason Crosby kicked a team-record 56-yard field goal and the Packers beat the Philadelphia Eagles 27-20. A concussion forced Eagles quarterback Kevin Kolb out of the game.

Colts stunned

► Undrafted Texans running back Arian Foster explodes for 231 yards, three touchdowns ► Indianapolis has historically dominated Houston

It took a record day by an undrafted running back for the Houston Texans to end years of frustration against Peyton Manning and the Indianapolis Colts.

carry the Texans to a 34-24 victory over the defending AFC champion Colts yesterday.

"Coming into the league, you don't know what to expect, especially if you are not heralded and there's not a lot of publicity," Foster said. "You see guys like Andre Johnson and Matt Schaub and the way they carry themselves, and you try to mimic it and make your own personality. I feel privileged to be here."

Foster had the NFL's second-best opening weekend rushing performance since 1933, topped only by Buffalo's O.J. Simpson's 250 in 1973 against New England.

The Texans (1-0) ran for a franchise record 257 yards and backed up their bold talk in the off-season that they were ready to challenge Indianapolis.

Running game

The Colts came into the game with 15 wins in 16 games in the series, including rallying from 17 points down in the previous two meetings in Houston.

Mendenhall comes through

GAME WINNER. Rashard Mendenhall ran 50 yards for a touchdown 2:35 into overtime and the Steelers overcame a shaky start by replacement quarterback Dennis Dixon and a missed field goal attempt late in regulation to beat the Atlanta Falcons 15-9 yesterday.

RUSHING. The Steelers leaned heavily on their retooled running game and defence without suspended star quarterback Ben Roethlisberger. Mendenhall carried 22 times for 120 yards and the game's only touchdown.

It was the third overtime game in as many Falcons-Steelers meetings. They played a 34-34 tie in 2002 at Heinz Field, and Atlanta won 41-38 at home in 2006.

In a recent article, Mike Holmes (of Canadian television popularity) talks about the benefits of tankless water heaters, both economically and environmentally:

"Environmentally responsible building is opening our eyes to some great, new technologies. But it's also getting us to take another look at really smart old ideas — such as tankless water heaters.

These have been used in Europe and Asia since the Second World War, but are only now coming into common use in North America. I'm a huge fan of these in-line hot water heaters. They are super efficient, space-saving products that — when installed properly — will last almost forever, cut your energy bill and supply unlimited hot water to your home. You can literally open up your tap, walk away, and still have hot water coming out a month later. Yes, they cost more initially, and you have to have them installed and calibrated to your household's use by an expert, but there is no doubt in my mind that you will get your money's worth.

Tankless water heaters are small — usually not much bigger than an electrical panel. When you turn on a hot water tap, a burner in the unit lights up and instantly heats water in a maze of copper pipe. With the tap open, the water flows through the heated pipes, and within seconds, you have continuous hot water. When you turn off the tap, the burner goes off. The result is you don't have to heat and store 40 gallons of water in your basement any more. You only heat the water you use, and you have hot water for as long as you need it.

The big difference between tank and tankless systems is that, while a tank system supplies a large amount of hot water for a limited time, a tankless one provides a smaller amount of hot water limitlessly. That means that with a tank, you can open all your taps and get all the hot water you want until the tank runs dry. The supply is limited. With a tankless system, you can open taps to the capacity of the heater and you'll get nice, hot water for as long as you want..."

Tseng beats Wie by a stroke

Taiwan's Yani Tseng won the Northwest Arkansas Championship yesterday for her third LPGA Tour victory of the year, shooting a 6-under 65 to rally past second-round leader Michelle Wie.

Tseng birdied four of five holes early on the back nine, then held on for a one-stroke victory over Wie with a birdie on No. 18. Tseng finished at 13-under 200.

Wie (69) gave up the lead on the back nine — the same half of the course she played in 7-under 28 during a scintillating stretch Saturday.

Today's horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 20

Thing will turn around for you and you could easily get carried away and believe that all your troubles are over. Maybe they are. More likely though they never existed in the first place.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21

You will gain a lot more respect, from both your rivals and your friends, if you don't pussyfoot around today. Decide what your goal is going to be and go for the jugular.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21

You may be tempted to choose the easy option and hope that you can get through the day without having to take tough decisions but it's unlikely to happen. And would you really be happy if it did? Challenge yourself.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22

No doubt you are tempted to cut corners and take the easiest route to your goal but it's better to go the long way round. You won't get there quicker but you will pick up some good experience along the way.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 23

You are thinking too much. Leos are better when taking action, so let your instincts guide you and don't hesitate to follow them down whatever dark alleys they might lead you.

♍ Virgo Aug. 24-Sept. 22

Your thoughts seem to be rather intense at the moment and you need to find ways to calm your mind and become more accepting, both of yourself and of other people.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Avoid disputes in which you do not know all the facts. If you get involved and support one side or the other you could end up out on a limb with no way to get back if you find yourself on the wrong side.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22

Whatever you say today someone will make an issue of it, but no great harm will result so long as you don't take their pontificating too seriously.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21

The planets urge you to aim high today, even though your resources may be a bit low. A little bit of effort will go a long way over the next 24 hours. It will go further still if it's got some thought behind it.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20

You may be envious of someone's luck and popularity but don't let it show. Just use them as a role model — an example of what you would like to be — and vow to be someone that others look up to in the future.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18

Keep your head today, especially if everyone else seems to be running around in a state of panic.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You seem to be under the impression that your options are limited, that there is only so much you can accomplish. That's nonsense. The only thing that is holding you back is your lack of self-belief.
